"The Border Ranger" is the feature picture at the Dreamland theatre, and is a thrilling dramatic photo-play of the western frontier. Dan Coughlin, a border ranger, captures "Easy" Joe, a half-breed, smuggling opium across the Mexican border line into the states. The half-breed is one of a band of smugglers who, when they learn of the capture of Joe, kidnap Dan's sweetheart, whom they declare they will not release until Joe is turned over to them. Dan, in an effort to rescue his sweetheart, falls into their trap and is threatened with death, when others of the boys rangers appear and, after an exciting battle, capture all of the gang and liberate the captives. This photo-play is in tensely thrilling, picturesque in its scenes and exquisitely photographed. It's at the Dreamland.
